Single Christian believers have been taught for years to wait on God to connect them with the right mate. Yet, many are living unbalanced lives of fear, doubt, and disbelief wondering if God is Sovereign enough to remember them in their season of singleness. Single men and women in the body of Christ share a common, universal thread: "What does it mean to wait?" "How do I wait on God and live a healthy, joyful, honorable life?" "How do I live a life of honor without yielding to the temptations of the world?" "Will marriage be worth my waiting?" In this book, "He Saved the Best for Last", singles are reminded that God knows each of his children. He knows all our preferences, our likes, and dislikes. Even the strands of hair on our heads are known by God. The identity of the individual that we will be compatible with is known by him also. Therefore, trust God today and don't depend on your 'list of requirements' for a mate. Requirements can be very taboo, and obviously they should not be concrete and set in stone. "You can live a life of enjoyment and peace while you wait on God. " You can be connected to the right person; the predestined person and live happily ever after.
