Recessions End: Stimulus For The Rest of Us. Michael Everett

Certain Laws are irrefutable. Take Gravity for example. If you jump off a building 100 times you will fall down EVERY time. You will never fall up! Well, certain economics laws are unbreakable as well. And the focus of this ground-breaking new work by economic and motivational expert, Michael Everett is that times of recession, just like times of expansion, must reverse course and end. That said, the question becomes "What is your plan for it?" Are you going to wait until the TV tells you that it's OK to come out and play again, or are you working on a plan NOW? The simple truth is that different sectors of the economy will emerge at different times. Further, certain individuals within those sectors will break out faster and further than others. Will you be one of them? When will your recession end? The answer to that question is that your particular experience of recession will end when you take the simple step of deciding it will! Most people are waiting around for conditions to improve before they dig back in. That creates an environment where it is easy to move around, getting what you need done with little or no competition. Michael will share techniques for getting your head back in the game, recognizing economic patterns and how to avoid getting caught up in a "herd mentality" for the rest of your life!
