Good manners and right conduct are important for society to work well. If every person will behave properly, society will be harmonious. Can you imagine a society where everyone treats each other with respect?

It is possible if only every parent will take it seriously to raise their kids knowing and practicing good manners and right conduct. As they say, the family is the foundation of society. Kids learn best through their parents. Their parents are their first and ultimate role models. Teach and show them good manners and they will grow up to be good members of society.

As parents, let us make it our mission in life to raise kids who will be a good contribution to society. Let us teach them social etiquette and good manners during their formative years. This can be as early as two years old when their minds are able to form opinions on their own. Although challenging, it is a possible task and the moment we are able to do it, the sense of accomplishment would no doubt be great.

In the end, it is the ultimate fulfillment of our duties as parents when we are able to raise kids who know good manners and right conduct.
